Dear Chancellor Hayes:

I am pleased to endorse the recommendation from Provost Kevin Whitaker, and Deans Susan Carvalho and Kay Palan for the addition of a Digital and Social Media Marketing concentration in the Master of Science in Marketing (CIP Code 52.1401). There is a growing demand for individuals with advanced digital and social media marketing expertise. This concentration, the only one at any state institution, will provide a path for students in the MSM to receive recognition for coursework in digital and social media marketing.

If you approve of this concentration, I would appreciate you forwarding this request to the Board of Trustees for their consideration.

Sincerely,

Stuart R. Bell
President

      N/A
10. Please state the rationale for the extension/alteration.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts that job demand for employees with digital and social media marketing skills will grow between 9% to 27% by 2024. The Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB) has also reported a consistent growth and need for social media marketing education. While analytical and data outputs continue to grow for marketing research, digital and social media marketing roles continue to be sought after by major employers. Companies and organizations, product manufacturers, and service providers are seeking marketers with a specific digital and social media marketing skill set.

Over the last decade, social media has transformed the way that business leaders approach marketing. The plethora of digital platforms available today, coupled with the massive number of online users, gives marketers an increased opportunity to interact with consumers in a more direct and cost-efficient manner. Students raised in this new digital era are also highly attuned to the market’s demand for employees with this skill set. Students at The University of Alabama’s Masters of Science in Marketing (MSM) program consistently request classes that emphasize the use of digital social media marketing strategy and tools.

The addition of a new clinical faculty member three years ago allowed the MSM program to tailor new coursework in digital and social media marketing, which enables students to graduate with a multitude of additional resume-building qualifications, including more than four professionally recognized certifications, real-world project experience, and participation in the international Google Online Marketing Challenge for Higher Education.

The University of Alabama’s MSM students and graduates have been hired at IBM, Apple, Black & Decker, Walmart Corporate, Home Depot Corporate, and more due in part to their completion of digital and social media marketing coursework. Already MSM students have placed in the top 10% of over 1,500 teams in the international Google Online Marketing Challenge. Given that no other concentration of this type exists in a graduate level program at an AACSB-accredited institution in the State of Alabama, if granted, this can be the first of its kind in the state and one of the first of its kind throughout the United States. At the time of this proposal, graduate level digital and social media marketing concentrations have been developed at New York University, Northwestern University, and the University of Texas at Austin. There is a clear marker of growth and demand by students, higher education institutions, and industries alike. Creating the Digital and Social Media Marketing Concentration for The University of Alabama MSM program will place The University of Alabama at the forefront of graduate education and business education nationwide.

The MSM program anticipates at least 20 to 30 students per year will enroll in this concentration when available and this will cause no budgetary, faculty, or additional resource requirements. Implementing the Digital and Social Media Marketing Concentration will allow the MSM program to continue to attract top student talent, while further elevating the reputation of the Manderson Graduate School of Business of the Culverhouse College of Commerce at The University of Alabama as a whole.
